The Tree in the Courtyard A book by Jeff Gottesfeld. HOME. ABOUT

Jeff Gottesfeld | The Tree in the Courtyard

The Tree in the Courtyard by Jeff Gottesfeld is a unique way to teach children about the Holocaust. Told from the perspective of the tree that sat outside Anne Franks window, the tree recounts its life and the smiling girl who lived in the attic with her family, the scary bombs, and how the little girl never came back.

The tree blooms "extra bright" the spring after the young girl and boy kiss. Then the people are taken away, and the "tree ke[eps] a vigil." Years later, the tree dies, only to have her seeds replanted in many cities. The book's nameless war is, of course, World War II, and the unnamed soldiers were German troops.

Under the orange trees there is a large aljibe (water tank) that provided water for the Muslim's purifications. In the 13th century palm trees were planted. Its from the 15th century when we know of the existence of the orange trees at this courtyard. In the 18th century olive and cypress trees were added.

History of the Mosque: The Orange Tree Courtyard

You want a tree to provide shade in a small, confined courtyard. You are concerned about the foundation and the walls. These are valid concerns and create constraints in choosing which trees to use. A small tree or large shrub trained into tree form may be the best choice. The New Mexico olive is one possibility.
